DEFINITIVE COURSE RECORD

This definitive record sets out the essential features and characteristics of the LLB (Hons) Law with Politics course. The information provided is accurate for students entering level 4 in the 2018-19 academic year⁵.

Course Summary

Law is taught from a range of perspectives, based on the finest traditions of legal education and recent innovations for the 21st century. Our approach is to examine law well beyond basic legal rules and legal institutions, taking account of wider contexts and discourses that allow deeper understanding of law in society. With this approach, the University of Suffolk provides students with firm grounding in the subject of law and the contexts in which law functions. Equally important is the breadth and depth of education that this subject facilitates. Students will be equipped to take on challenging questions about law and related issues, and to apply their knowledge and skills in a variety of contexts. This ethos runs right through all subjects in the law curriculum and enhanced even more with combinations in other social sciences.

This course places emphasis on the uses of law to solve problems. With this in mind, teaching and learning on this course is designed to encourage the development of strong legal and problem-solving skills. In addition to engaging in legal reasoning, students also learn how to analyse the impact of law in society. Though law is often studied as a distinct subject, its methods and analytical approaches draw on fields within the humanities and the social sciences. Students will have the opportunity to develop skills in the use of empirical research, including quantitative data. Those intending to embark on careers in legal practice will be exempted from the academic stage of legal training as determined by the Bar Standards Board and the Solicitor's Regulation Authority, or gain exemptions from aspects of the CILEX programme for specialist lawyers.

Politics at Suffolk seeks to enable students to take an informed, independent perspective on power, ideas and values, taking into account political theory, British politics and international comparative politics. Throughout the course, we will maintain a critical focus on how political ideas and policies translate into 'real, felt' political action and outcomes 'on the ground'. This includes, for example, relating theory to contemporary social justice and social policy issues. It also includes students' active engagement in the subject and the course is built around a backbone of students' involvement in project work, applied social science research and opportunities for political engagement and professional development. By the end of the course, as well as having gained a good, broad knowledge of political science, students will be ready to enter employment or further study with skills in political analysis, critical awareness of the organisational context of change and influence, and interpersonal skills in advocacy and persuasion.

Course Aims

- Develop comprehensive knowledge of public and private laws, including theories, concepts, principles and rules, with specific reference to England and Wales.

⁵ The University reserves the right to make changes to course content, structure, teaching and assessment as outlined in the Admissions Policy.
