Course Summary

The BA (Hons) Childhood: Primary Education with QTS explores the diverse, multi-faceted experiences of children through a range of perspectives, with a particular focus on acquiring an in-depth understanding of Primary Education and professional specific knowledge and practice skills required for the attainment of Qualified Teacher Status (QTS). The programme is offered within the School of Business, Arts, Social Sciences and Technology in partnership with local Initial Teacher Trainer (ITT) providers (Colchester Teacher Training Consortium [CTTC]).

This programme is distinctive from traditional undergraduate programmes as it provides you with an accelerated route into the teaching profession. Each year consists of a full-time academic programme (120 credits of academic modules) in combination with a yearlong school placement in which you will work towards obtaining Qualified Teacher Status (QTS).

In Year 1, all academic modules are situated within the BA (Hons) Childhood programme, delivered by University of Suffolk. From Year 2 onwards, you will take 60 credits within the Childhood programme. The remaining 60 credits (professional, subject-specific modules) are jointly delivered by the ITT providers. Throughout all three years of the programme, practice will be a combination of year-long placements in combination with more intense practice blocks. Placements will take place in at least two different schools to ensure a range of settings and teaching contexts.

Upon successful completion of the programme, you will have obtained Qualified Teacher Status which will allow you to take up a qualified teacher position in a primary school.

Course Delivery

The course is delivered at Ipswich at the University of Suffolk. Students studying full-time on BA (Hons) Childhood: Primary Education with QTS will be taught within a blended learning environment where structured tutor-led learning is delivered on-campus, with online activities being completed independently. Students are likely to have approximately 72 hours structured tutor-led time per module for level 4, 72 hours structured tutor-led time per module for level 5 and 54 hours structured tutor-led time per module for level 6. This tutor-led time will be a mix of synchronous and asynchronous learning activities such as lectures, seminars, tutorials, and learning activities.

School placements are synchronised with the primary school year (September to July) and are therefore longer than the University's academic year. Each year, students will spend 1 day a week in school during the school term and also undertake a block placement near the end of the academic year (May-July). During block placement, students will be in their placement school for 5 days per week. The block placements increase in length through the course so that by Year 3, the students will be undertaking the majority of planning, teaching and assessing within their placement class for a period of 42 days. Placements will be arranged by the ITT providers.

In addition to the general school placement, students will undertake 30 days of Intensive Training and Practice blocks (ITaPs). These focus on specific and foundational aspects of teaching like behaviour management or questioning techniques. They are designed to give students a concentrated, hands-on experience in applying evidence-based teaching strategies—bridging the gap between theory and classroom practice. They are delivered through a mix of campus-based training and school placement.

Students will normally be expected to undertake 12 hours of independent study per academic module in an average week, alongside independent study and preparation related to the school placement and practice module. Students should be prepared for this to vary based on assignment deadlines and class exercises.
