This definitive record sets out the essential features and characteristics of the MA History. The information provided is accurate for students entering level 7 in the 2027-28 academic year⁵.

Course Summary

The MA in History at the University of Suffolk focusses on the modern period (broadly 1750 onwards) and explores topics and issues at a local, national, international and global level which are not only some of the most relevant and pressing of our own times, but which are also at the forefront of current historiographical enquiry, these include identity, family and lifecycle, migration, environmental change, war and conflict and experiences of modernity and globalisation. These concerns are reflected within the broad themes around which the MA is organised Identity, Lifecycle and Mobility, War and Conflict, Environmental Change, Modernity and Globalisation. Across the curriculum and within these themes there will be a recurrent concern with the connection and interrelation between local and international/global experience. Several modules on the MA in History will explore the historical experience of the local region (Suffolk/East Anglia) as part of this purposefully comparative approach.

DEFINITIVE COURSE RECORD

As part of your studies you will also gain the practical Research Skills and competencies required to operate as a successful historian and essential to many other professions and careers. You will learn how to interrogate the different types of evidence that historians use to interpret the past, about relationships between academic and public history, and be supported to develop your own innovative approaches to primary and secondary sources. In addition to participating in taught modules you will also develop and pursue your own research agenda in a final research dissertation project. This is an opportunity to design and complete an original piece of research which will mark the culmination of your studies, and which will make a significant contribution to knowledge in your chosen area.

One of the unique features of the MA in History at University of Suffolk is our relationship with the HOLD. Much of your teaching and learning will take place within this new purpose-built archive and learning centre located on the University Campus. This means that you will have unrivalled access to primary sources and, as well as the support you will receive from the University of Suffolk History team, you will benefit from the input and expertise of professional archivists and public history specialists who will work alongside us. Our relationship with the HOLD will also support our exploration of and engagement with Public History which is a further key theme of the MA. Public History is both a cross-cutting theme of the MA and the focus of a specific module which will support students to develop real-world experience working with a heritage provider to complete a public history project.

Course Aims

1. To stimulate the historical imagination of students through a critical engagement with the past.
2. To provide students with an advanced understanding of the methods and techniques of the historical discipline, based on a critical awareness of current problems and scholarship at the forefront of the field.
3. To allow students to develop a critical awareness of selected sub-fields of History with respect to relevant social, cultural, environmental, political, and economic contexts.
4. To encourage students to develop critical, analytical and research skills, problem solving skills, and transferable skills, appropriate to the study of History.
5. To allow students to design and conduct a substantial independent study in a chosen historical subject area.
6. To prepare students for further study and/or employment through the development of their knowledge and abilities.

Course Learning Outcomes

The following statements define what students graduating from the MA History will have been judged to have demonstrated in order to achieve the award. These statements, known as

Awards

On successful completion of the course, students will be awarded an MA History. Students who leave the course early may be eligible for a Postgraduate Diploma in History on successful completion of 120 credits or a Postgraduate Certificate in History on successful completion of 60 credits.

Course Delivery

The course is delivered at Ipswich. Students studying full-time on MA History will have approximately 6 to 8 contact hours per week. The contact hours will consist of a mixture of seminars, workshops, and tutorials. Students will normally be expected to undertake approximately 30 hours of independent study in an average week but should be prepared for this to vary based on assignment deadlines and class exercises.

Course Assessment

A variety of assessments will be used on the course to enable students to experience and adapt to different assessment styles. The assessment methods used will be appropriate to assess each module's intended learning outcomes. Assessment on the course overall will be predominantly coursework (including essays, presentations, bibliographies, project work and other web-based outputs).

Course Team

The academic staff delivering this course are drawn from a team that includes teaching specialists and current practitioners. All staff are qualified in their subjects with their own specialist knowledge to contribute.

Course Costs

Students undertaking the MA History will be charged tuition fees as detailed below.
