aspects of the real world that are complex and challenging such as inequality, violence, unfairness, or injustice. Sociology students study these challenging areas when examining social change, globalisation, migration, gender and sexuality, technology and social theory.

By studying sociology at the University of Suffolk you will become sensitive to the wider social context of our lived experience and learn to look beyond a narrow focus on the individual in any life situation. This attention to context will allow you to make more informed decisions. Studying sociology equips students with analytical, decision making and research skills necessary for many vocations. This course will allow you to be innovative, ask awkward questions, and develop good group working skills. It is this combination that makes sociology graduates employable. It is an education for a thoughtful and useful life.

Course Aims

1. To investigate the changing nature of social life with its consequences for patterns of diversity, inequality, and injustice
2. To study and develop a critical account of the key features and debates in social theory that aim to explain social life
3. To develop an ethical framework and a questioning and critical approach to the social life at the local, national, regional and global levels
4. To encourage cognitive development and autonomous learning.
5. To develop subject specific, cognitive and information management skills of value in employment, further study and personal development.
6. To promote increasing participation in education by supporting a range of learners, including non-traditional entrants, at degree level

Course Learning Outcomes

The following statements define what students graduating from the BSc (Hons) Sociology course will have been judged to have demonstrated in order to achieve the award. These statements, known as learning outcomes, have been formally approved as aligned with the generic qualification descriptor for level 4/5/6 awards as set out by the UK Quality Assurance Agency (QAA)[6].

1. Show deep and proficient knowledge, critical analysis of a range of sociological approaches, theories, concepts, research, and their applications
2. Critically examine a range of processes that underpin social change
3. Give a thorough account of social diversity and inequalities
4. Use, develop and critically evaluate sociological arguments, perspectives, and evidence in a range of social contexts
5. Develop and critically discuss a sociologically informed ethical framework and awareness of major social problems and challenges at the local, national, regional, and global level
6. Design, conduct, analyse, and report sociological research using quantitative, qualitative, comparative, or mixed method approaches and primary and secondary sources using appropriate data analysis techniques and software

[6] As set out in the QAA Frameworks for Higher Education Qualifications of UK Degree-Awarding Bodies (2024)

7. Develop sociologically informed questions and undertake and critically evaluate a research project
8. Manage own learning and communicate it effectively through finding and making good use of academic literature, reliable data, competent and ethical use of AI tools and sociological arguments
