Course Summary

Applied Sociology

Applied Sociology is a degree which aims to show students the relevance of sociology to everyday life. Applied sociologists work in various industries, including private business, government agencies and not-for-profit organisations. The work of applied sociologists is especially concerned with changing the current state of social life for the better. This can include anything from increasing the health and wellbeing of a disadvantaged community group; working with law enforcement organisations to implement a rehabilitation program for criminal offenders; assisting in planning for natural disasters; and enhancing existing government programs and policies.

Religious Studies

Religious Studies aims to explore a broad swathe of world religions and non-theistic philosophies to gain both an historical and contemporary understanding of how large groups of people view the world and the nature of Life itself. The course makes neither assumptions about the truth of metaphysical claims nor attempts to “prove” that one ideology is superior to another, but seeks to understand each belief system on its own terms.

The course focusses on central texts and engages in literary exegesis and historical contextualisation. It also explores the historical and social development of major religious movements and their interaction both with each other and also non-religious forces (such as governments, scientific advances etc.).

Course Aims

Applied Sociology

• To provide the opportunity for students to develop an understanding of major concepts and themes in contemporary sociology and an ability to relate them to life in the community and globally

• Students will develop a critical approach to their studies in sociology, evaluating theory and evidence accordingly

• To ensure that students develop autonomous learning and research skills which provide a basis for lifelong learning

• To develop and enhance skills in written, oral and IT communication

• To ensure that students have the opportunities to develop a range of analytic and graduate skills adequate for a range of professional and life situations

Religious Studies

• Give an overview of the development of theological thought from early animism, through polytheism and on to monotheism and non-theistic philosophies

• Outline the major religious traditions extant in the world today, setting out their central teachings, ethical codes, festivals and modes of worship

• Tackle some of the major moral dilemmas found in many religions, especially dealing with issues of suffering and cruelty

• Develop student skills in exegesis of a variety of texts that are held to be sacred

• Expound research issues both in the study of ancient and modern religions

• Contrast eastern and western modes of thought and their mutual interactions

• Create opportunities to consider the artistic, ethical, gendered, social, political and cultural characteristics of religion(s)

• Foster empathetic engagement with both the familiar and unfamiliar

• Explore in an interdisciplinary way, the interface between religious studies, and other combined honours subjects of Ethics, History and Sociology
University of Suffolk
