DEFINITIVE COURSE RECORD

It is accessed as a “stand-alone” module for community nurses who are not undertaking the specialist practice community pathway (SCPHN). Nurses on the SCPHN pathway undertake the v100 which leads to the same community practitioner nurse prescriber qualification.

The NMC set the standards for the educational requirements for all non-medical prescribing pathways and this informs the curriculum. These requirements do not call for teaching on specific clinical areas, but some specifics are included but the overall focus is on applying the principles of prescribing to your own specialist clinical area. It is expected therefore that students embrace a high degree of autonomy to apply these principles to the context of their practice. The equal theory practice split is designed to facilitate this approach so the role of the practice-based mentor is paramount.

The combined learning with the v300 independent prescribing course offers student's opportunity to share learning with a diverse selection of other practitioners and this is one of the most valued aspects. In addition some separate teaching sessions specific to the Community prescribers formulary are scheduled for students on the v150 course.

Students are required to attend the university campus for 10 academic days (plus 1 assessment day).

Attendance in school is approximately 1 day per week. A small proportion of the days are allocated as “self- directed leaning days/online learning”, the nature of these will be explained at the start of the course and although you will not be required to attend campus on those particular days they are an integral part of the campus based learning so you do not go into work.

In addition, the equal practice theory split of this course means you are required to organise practice based mentoring for the duration of the course. This support is essential to your development as a prescriber and must be provided by a prescriber. The regulators specify the required time for this practice mentoring, it is 65 hours.

Course Aims

The education programme aims to prepare nurses to prescribe safely, appropriately and cost-effectively from the community practitioner formulary for nurse prescribers.
