This definitive record sets out the essential features and characteristics of the BA (Hons) History with English course. The information provided is accurate for students entering level 4 in the 2017-18 academic year<sup>5</sup>.

Course Summary

In this major/minor combination History is studied with more weight than English. Both subjects complement each other very well, the study of history providing valuable context to English literature. Equally, historians often draw on historical literary texts to enrich understanding of historical contexts. History as the “major” part of the degree will develop students’ understanding of historical processes through the study of a range of periods and geographical contexts, promoting awareness of continuity and change. Modules span the early modern period to the present and embrace two identifiable strands: British Social and Cultural History and Family and Community History.

The study of English literature in this combination is organised to great extent chronologically and in some instances tutors of one discipline contribute directly to the teaching of the other. English considers all three principal literary genres: drama, fiction and poetry in roughly equal weight over the three year programme.
