Course Summary

This taught postgraduate course has been developed for postgraduate students or senior professionals interested in specialised or advanced study of childhood. It will, therefore, be of particular interest to those wishing to be or already employed in the children and young people's workforce. In line with recent international developments in social studies of childhood, this programme is interdisciplinary in approach but has a strong emphasis on perspectives drawn from sociology, social policy, history, English, and anthropology. The course is informed by the United Nations Rights of the Child (UNCRC) framework and draws on current methodological standpoints in childhood research that emphasise participation. It is committed to adopting a 'child-centred' philosophy throughout and reflects the principles of protecting the rights and interests of children and young people and the increasing importance of participation. The changing conditions of childhood and the ways in which children and young people themselves experience and understand their everyday lives is emphasised throughout. The course is delivered through a blended learning approach, employing both traditional methods of teaching and technology-enhanced learning to provide a dynamic and exciting master's course.

Course Aims

1. Offer an innovative, dynamic and flexible programme that critically considers developments in the academic study of childhood and the changing contexts of childhood in a globalised world;
2. Critically explore the cultural and social constructions of childhood and the implications that they have had and continue to have on children's everyday lives;
3. Advance students' knowledge of the complexity of understanding the relationship between children's rights, the ideologies and responsibilities for welfare and the lived realities of children's diverse experiences;
4. Provide a robust theoretical framework for students to develop an integrated and critically aware understanding of childhood studies and to cultivate a critical and analytical approach and to engage meaningfully with contemporary methodological advances in childhood research and the research process;
5. Develop in students a range of intellectual skills reflecting both the ethos of lifelong learning and the rigour required at Master's level, a high level of student autonomy and self-direction in order to facilitate the student to demonstrate initiative, originality alongside integrity and ethical judgement in their advanced scholarship and to become influential and effective specialists in the field of childhood studies.

Course Learning Outcomes

The following statements define what students graduating from the MA Childhood Studies course will have been judged to have demonstrated in order to achieve the award. These statements, known as learning outcomes, have been formally approved as aligned with the generic qualification descriptor for level 7 awards as set out by the UK Quality Assurance Agency (QAA)⁶.

1. A systematic understanding of knowledge and a critical awareness of contemporary issues and recent developments which are at, or informed by, the forefront of childhood studies;
2. A comprehensive understanding of the appropriate techniques applicable to their own research or advanced scholarship and originality in their application of that knowledge to derive solutions to / recommendations to resolve complex situations and address issues in relation to children;
3. A conceptual understanding of children's rights and welfare that enables the student to evaluate critically complex issues, both systematically and creatively, to evaluate improving outcomes for children;
4. Advanced scholarship of childhood studies through a critical evaluation and analysis of methodologies and previous/current to propose new research questions and directions;
5. The skills required to exercise independent learning and to develop these skills to a high level so as to work with self-direction and originality, to communicate their conclusions clearly to specialist and non-specialist audiences so as to contribute to the academic study of childhood studies.

Some optional modules may not run in every year of study, and the availability of optional modules depends on the level of student demand, the availability of specialist staff and timetabling constraints. In addition, we regularly review our curriculum to ensure it is up-to-date, relevant, draws on the latest research and addresses contemporary issues. As a result, the modules we offer may change over the course of your degree.

Awards

On successful completion of the course, students will be awarded a PgC Childhood Studies.

⁷ Modules are designated as either mandatory (M), requisite (R) or optional (O). For definitions, see the Framework and Regulations for Taught Postgraduate Awards

DEFINITIVE COURSE RECORD

Course Delivery

The course is delivered at Ipswich. Students studying full-time are likely to have approximately 168 hours of tutor structured learning across the course. Tutor structure learning will be a mix of lecture, seminar, practical activities and guided learning activities through our online learning environment (OLE). The Online Learning Environment (OLE) provides opportunities for students to engage with course materials and relevant readings and for interactions with peers and tutors through discussion boards, blogs, wikis and other interactive learning tools. Students will normally be expected to undertake approximately 25 hours of independent study in an average week, but should be prepared for this to vary based on assignment deadlines and class exercises.

Course Assessment

A variety of assessments will be used on the course to enable students to experience and adapt to different assessment styles. The assessment methods used will be appropriate to assess each module's intended learning outcomes. Assessment on the course overall will be almost entirely coursework (including essays, research reports, presentations, reflective diaries, and creation of intervention tools or creative artefacts, and research projects).

Course Team

The academic staff delivering this course are drawn from a team that includes teaching specialists and current practitioners. All staff are qualified in their subjects with their own specialist knowledge to contribute.

Course Costs
