This definitive record sets out the essential features and characteristics of the BA (Hons) English and Applied Sociology course. The information provided is accurate for students entering level 4 in the 2020-21 academic year.

Course Summary
English and Applied Sociology is a joint combination in which both subjects are given approximately equal weight. Both have their own theoretical underpinning and academic conventions and their combination provides a valuable opportunity to develop more versatile skills and perspectives as well as an appreciation of interdisciplinary connections.

English and sociology complement each other as they share issues including gender, race and ethnicity, deviance and mental illness. Both disciplines reinforce an understanding and appreciation of theories such as Marxism, Gender theory and Post-modernism - all of which help foster interdisciplinary connections and conceptual depth across both disciplines.

Level 4 acts as a foundation that establishes intellectual cross-fertilisation. Modules such as Making Sense of Modernity and Contemporary Social Inequalities explore issues including gender, class and ethnicity, which are reflected within the thematic debates raised in

Introduction to Drama and Reading Poetry. Approaches to Fiction examines key theoretical positions including Marxism, Gender theory and Post-Colonialism which is explored in sociology Making Sense of Modernity and Contemporary Social Inequalities.

Level 5 and Level 6 continue to develop a theoretical knowledge base whilst examining key societal concerns shared with literature. The level 5 sociology module Theorising Social Life helps students expand their ability to apply theory to the reading of gender, race and class, which is reciprocated within Challenging Shakespeare, Gothic Fiction and Late Victorian Literature leading to deep learning. Similarly, the Level 6 module, The Sociology of Health and Illness enhances a reciprocal and nuanced examination of theory within the module Monsters, Madness and Modernity which explores the demonization of ‘otherness’ through forms of ‘madness’ and disability.

Course Aims

English

- provide students with the opportunity to acquire substantial knowledge of literature in English, including literature in translation, from a range of historical periods and cultural contexts and spanning the principal genres of poetry, prose and drama;

- engage students imaginatively and intellectually in the process of reading and analysing complex and sophisticated literary texts;

- encourage the development of intellectual maturity, openness of mind and an imaginative and creative approach to problem-solving;

- enable students to develop a range of subject specific and transferable skills of value in employment including high-order skills in oral and written communication, in research and in the interpretation and presentation of information;

- provide opportunities for the study of literature in both interdisciplinary and contextual frameworks;

- provide the opportunity for students to gain confidence in working both independently and as a member or leader of a group or team;

- facilitate the development of graduate-level skills in speaking, writing and research;

- encourage in students an enthusiasm for the subject and an appreciation of its continuing social and cultural importance;

- to equip students to progress to further study of English and to professional training after graduation.

Applied Sociology

- To provide the opportunity for students to develop an understanding of major concepts and themes in contemporary sociology and an ability to relate them to life in the community and globally;

- Students will develop a critical approach to their studies in sociology, evaluating theory and evidence accordingly;
