practising person-centred counsellors and offers a wide range of learning experiences including experiential, theoretical, placements, group and individual work. There is a high level of individual tutor support and assessments are varied. The course offers opportunities for personal development and is designed and implemented in accordance with the British Association for Counsellors and Psychotherapists (BACP) requirements.

Course Aims

1. To promote the development of the student as a professional, reflective, autonomous, competent counsellor, aware of legal and ethical boundaries and able to take responsibilities and make sound judgments across a range of contexts.
2. To enhance employability by developing key and graduate skills in conjunction with specific work-place competencies.
3. To provide graduates with knowledge and skills which are relevant to regional counselling provision across service user groups [i.e. local authority, NHS, independent private and voluntary organisations], to meet local, regional, and national employment needs.
4. To create a strong foundation for lifelong learning and continuing professional development.
5. To meet the demands of a full-time professional education in the person-centered approach.
6. To prepare students to practice as person-centered counsellors, and to use the person-centered approach in other fields.
7. To improve training and education opportunities within the East Anglia region in the growing field of health and social care.
8. To meet the training requirements of the BACP in terms of academic learning, skills' training, placements and personal development and thereby prepare students for accreditation.
9. To provide progression with respect to further educational, professional and personal development pathways.
10. To provide opportunities that facilitate widening participation by local/non-standard entrants to study counselling and become professionals in this field.
11. To encourage cognitive development and autonomous learning.
12. To encourage emotional development and self-awareness which is a necessary requirement to a career in counselling.
